

Farce Exclusive

Massive coverup or just another farce? Farce publisher rumored dead!

BEREA, OH - Just when you think you've heard the final conspiracy theory or have read the final outlandish rumors concerning higher-up secrets and coverups comes the shocker of the century.

Weekly Farce publisher Ken McEntee is dead!

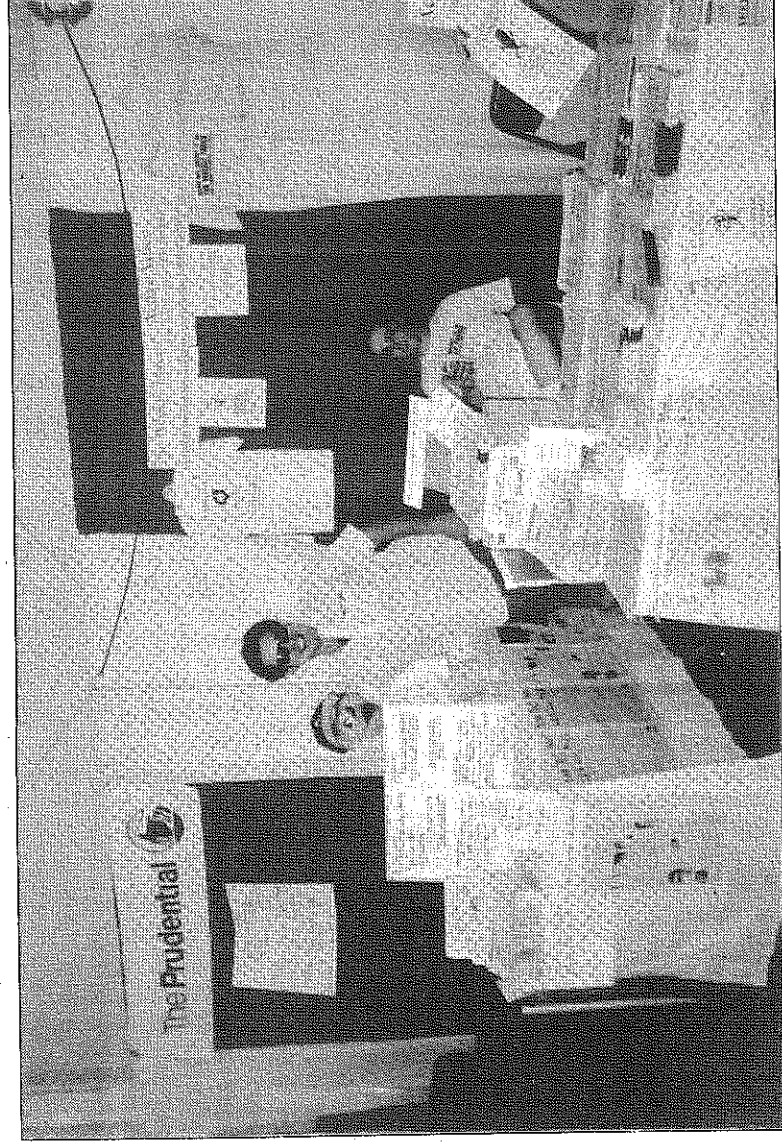

So says a growing legion of Farce aficionados who've been covering this story since, they say, last August.

According to Beans Proctor, a Farce expert and subscriber since the publication's inception in 1988, there's been a lot of "funny stuff" going on around Active Communications offices ever since the company's participation in last summer's Cuyahoga County Fair.

Proctor began looking into the situation some eight months ago when rumors concerning the elder McEntee brother's death first began circulating during Fair Week; and what he has dug himself into, Proctor claims, is a bottomless quagmire full of international intrigue, conspiracies and double dealings.

It all started when Farce fans who flocked to the Active Communications fair exhibit to gobble up Farce and Active Voice memorabilia noticed something puzzling about the figure, purported to be Ken McEntee, manning the booth. Not only was he dozing off during his shift, but he also seemed to be making fast associations with some very unsavory characters.

But besides acting averse to his reputation as "one who never sleeps" and hanging out with hoodlums, something more was amiss. When McEntee wasn't too busy snoozing behind the table, Fair patrons noticed an uneasy distance that seemed to be present between the erstwhile publisher and Eppy, the one-eared monkey boy who has become a Farce legend and confidante to the McEntee boys. Eppy, who plugged some time at the Farce's Fair booth to lure in dupes, kept noticeably distant from his usually inseparable buddy, and McEntee, it seemed, made it a point to showcase Eppy as a freakshow attraction. Hardly best-buddy behavior. Hardly Ken McEntee behavior. Or was it Ken McEntee?

This shocking photograph, taken during the 1993 Cuyahoga County Fair and obtained by private Farce investigators, hints at a somewhat suspicious relationship between renowned terrorist, embezzler and jaywalker Slip Wax (second from left) and Farce publisher Ken McEntee (seated at right). Experts believe this was more than just a chance meeting. They also believe that's not the real Ken McEntee in the photograph, but rather a double who took over after the real Ken McEntee's murder. Farce legend and McEntee brothers confidante Eppy the one-eared monkey boy is standing on the table (far left).

There were reports last fall that McEntee, while at the Fair, was seen fraternizing with one Jet "the Red Baron" Kovoley, renowned Finnish spy who is wanted for treason in 15 countries. Beans Proctor even gained possession of a photo clearly showing Kovoley with friends, gawking at Farce material. The problem is, Ken McEntee is not shown in the picture cavorting with Kovoley. Pure coincidence then, that this century's top global spy just happened to be strolling by The Farce booth? Perhaps. But where did this shocking picture come from? Enter Slip Wax, renowned terrorist, embezzler and jaywalker. Wax mysteriously slipped Proctor the picture of Kovoley during a Cleveland Crunch game timeout, whispered "You don't know me," and climbed a ladder to the roof of CSU's Convocation Center where a waiting helicopter took him away.

What sense does this make? None, at least to Proctor. That is, until he received a very interesting item in the mail with an anonymous note that said, "I don't know about you, but I'm barking up the wrong tree. This pooch is through sniffing. Good luck."

With the letter was a picture taken the week of the Fair, which clearly shows Ken McEntee not only allowing Slip Wax to chum around with him inside the restricted booth area, but sharing a Pepsi with the hooligan to boot. Or was it Ken McEntee? Beans Proctor believes the man in the picture wants everyone to think he's Ken McEntee, but that the real Ken McEntee was given a pair of cement shoes and a one-way ticket to Lake Erie's beautiful floor. Proctor says Ken McEntee is a double for the real Ken McEntee, and that clues to prove his theory have been sweeping up like brushfire over the last eight months.

Though he admits he's yet to find some major pieces of the puzzle, Proctor is confident he's secured the motive.

"The Farce was getting too big," Proctor said. "The boys were starting to make some inroads, right? They started doing their own thing, getting the people off their apathetic, lazy asses, right? So what happens? They gotta take a hit."

Proctor says a recording exists on which the following conversation ensues between Jet Kovoley and Slip Wax:

Slip: "What are we gonna do about the M&M boys?"

Jet: "They're not funny."

Slip: "I know. But they're dangerous."

Jet: "Good point. We don't want 'em barkin' and we don't want 'em waggin' their tails too fast."

Slip: "Whataya' gettin' at?"

Jet: "Look, you slap the dog and the pooch goes to bed."

Slip: "Not necessarily. Look what happened with the Kennedy thing. They slapped the dog, the pooch got mad. They had to slap the dog again. We don't want this thing getting messy."

Jet: "Good point, Slip Wax."

Slip: "What the hell you sayin' my name for? What if this thing is being recorded? You idiot!"

Jet: "Don't worry about it."

Slip: "Alright."

Jet: "Anyhow, what was I sayin'? Oh yeah, yeah. How about we do this? We slap the dog but don't let no one know we slapped it."

Slip: "A double?"

Jet: "A double."

Slip: "I double dog dare ya" (laughter)

Jet: "That's pretty good. Did you think of that yourself?"

Slip: "Kind of."

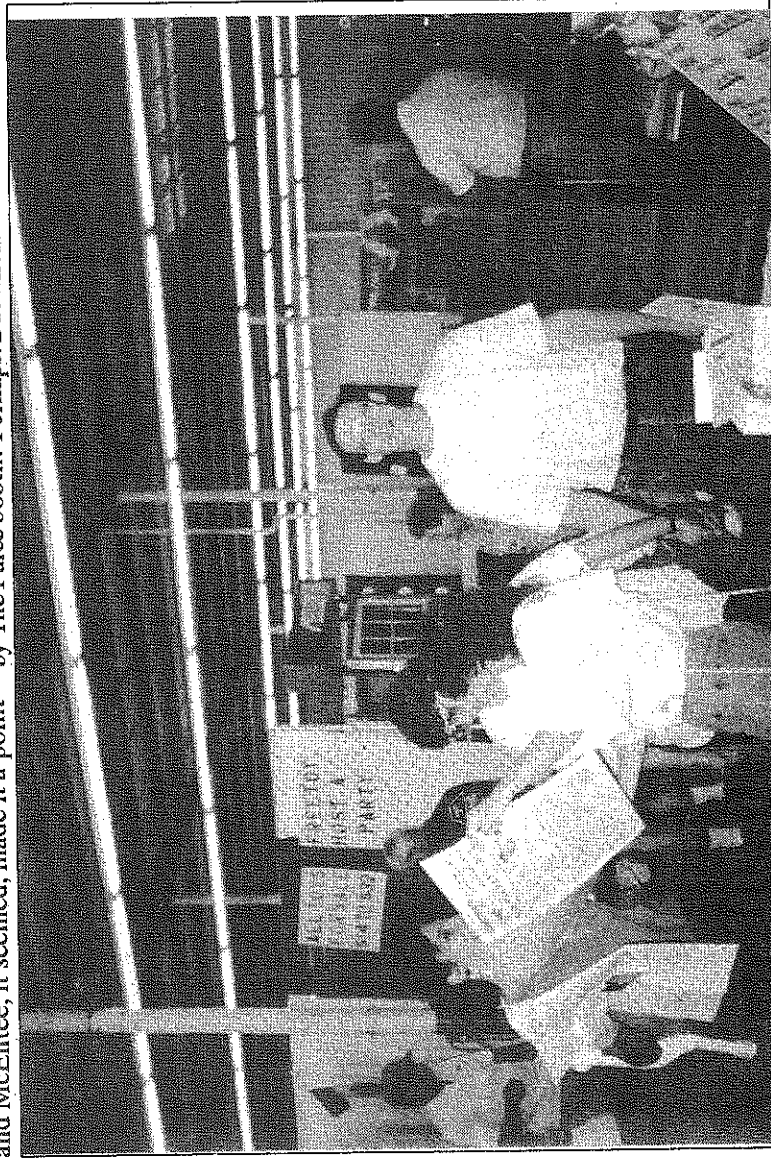

Proctor thinks the double was inserted by international elitists to keep The Farce and Active Voice at bay while also holding down any possible reprisals for "slapping the dog." But who this double is, if indeed is a double, is the puzzle piece still lost somewhere under the couch. Proctor believes it will eventually be found somewhere in the myriad of clues that seem to support his Ken McEntee double theory.

For your own scrutinization and judgment, consider the following:

* On one of local radio station WMJI's recent morning shows, John Lanigan signed off by saying, "Nek Deirub I," to which John Webster replied, "Oh, really?" Hardly newsworthy, unless you play the tape backward to hear Lanigan clearly say, "I buried Ken."

* Ron McEntee, Ken's brother and

(See Death, page 8)

International spy Jet "the Red Baron" Kovoley made a surprise appearance at The Weekly Farce's 1993 Cuyahoga County Fair booth last August, about the same time Ken McEntee began acting peculiarly. Investigators who gained access to this incredible photo think Kovoley was doing more than playing happy fair patron that day. To the left is famous artist Lulie Longhill, who may be somehow linked to the plot to kill Ken McEntee. Whether Longhill was involved or not, there's an important question worth asking. What are Kovoley, Longhill and their accomplices laughing at and why aren't they telling?

New airport doesn't use enough luggage

UNIVER - The opening of the city's $3.2 billion airport has been delayed a third time since October after airport officials determined that there is a major problem with the facility's automatic baggage system.

"The damn thing doesn't lose nearly enough luggage to be accredited by the National Airport Association," said a spokesman Mayor Wellington Webb.

The state-of-the-art system uses a series of barcodes and electronic eyes to direct luggage to the appropriate return station.

Gorazde

(From page 1)

telling Clinton-Rodham to "get bent," dropped a series of shells on town. Clinton immediately responded to the warning, "Okay, but next time we really going to get it. And I'm not going around either."

Then called United Nations General Secretary Boutros Boutros-Gud-Ghaly for instructions.

"I think maybe the problem is that I didn't think that this was an ultimatum," Clinton-Rodham said. "That's probably where mistake was made and I'm very sorry for it hey, we all have to learn on the job you all knew I didn't have any foreign experience when you all elected me, hey, how about those Razorbacks?"

Clinton-Rodham is said to be under heavy pressure in trying to please NATO and the United Nations, both of which want control of S. troops in the new world order, but times seem to give conflicting instructions.

NATO tells the premier to do one thing the U.N. demands another," said the House aid George Weaselopoulous. "The premier is caught in the middle, but he no mistake about it. He is in charge of running this operation as well as can be expected."

United Nations officials are frustrated the Serbs continue to bomb areas that the U.N. has declared off limits. Gorazde is one such designated area.

"We given clear instructions to the Serbs where they can bomb and where they can't," Gud-Ghaly said. "They are not playing by the rules and therefore must pay."

The Serbian bombing has left the town of Gorazde in shambles and has left the people without many essential supplies. This has caused concern in Washington.

Joycelyn Elders, Health and Human Services secretary, has asked Clinton-Rodham whether a skydrop can be used to distribute badly-needed condoms to the residents.

"The threat of AIDS during this time of upheaval is particularly upsetting," she said, speaking from her son's prison cell during visiting hours.

Earlier in the week, Clinton-Rodham said threats of military retaliation drove the Serbs out of the town of Buba. The Serbs bombed and raided the town for a week, defying warnings from Clinton-Rodham, NATO and the U.N. that retaliation would result if the actions didn't stop.

Within a week, with the entire town burned to the ground and all of it's residents killed, the Serbs, intimidated by the warnings, finally withdrew.

"You see, if they know that you mean business, they run away like scared rabbits," Clinton-Rodham said.

foolery, as always," said Doolittle, who was once shot in the head during a campaign appearance, of his campaign for the senate. "I'm not the guy the establishment wants in there, but I've withstood every obstacle there is and I'm still around. And I plan to win this one. You have my word on it."

queaky

(From page 2)

"In puncher," costing him the election. In 1990, an honest mistake by election boards in all 88 counties resulted in Doolittle's name being left off of all gubernatorial ballots in an election won by George Novich.

I am expecting plenty of political tom-

Weekly Farce and Active Voice T-Shirts available. $10 includes postage. Call 243-2189 and find out all about it.

THE WEEKLY FARCE

AMERICA'S FUNNIEST NEWSPAPER

Copyright 1994, Active Communications Inc.

All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part without permission of Active Communications Inc. is prohibited.

Death

(From page 6)

partner in Active Communications, received a phone threat from a voice similar to that of Jet Kovoley which said: "Ron McEntee, you will die. Within the next 30 days, we will kill you. Remember, you will die. Ha ha ha ha."

Beans Proctor believes

the man in the picture

wants everyone to think

he's Ken McEntee, but

that the real Ken

McEntee was given a

pair of cement shoes and

a one-way ticket to Lake

Erie's beautiful floor.

Proctor says Ken

McEntee is a double for

the real Ken McEntee,

and that clues to prove

his theory have been

sweeping up like

brushfire over the last eight months.

Was it Jet Kovoley, and did they mean to say Ken McEntee? Or is it possible that attempts were made on Ron McEntee's life that proved unsuccessful, thus requiring a slight change in plans? It has been documented that a large piano was dropped from an I-71 overpass as Ron McEntee's car sped below. Could this have been the blundered attempt on his life, or did Laurel and Hardy just happen to be on the overpass that day?

* Ron McEntee reportedly also had a dream in which he and Ken were ambushed with gunfire in the parking lot of George Klein News Company, the outfit that serves as distributor of The Weekly Farce. But was it a dream?

* The questionable associations Ken McEntee seemed to develop in a twinkling with Slip Wax and, according to witnesses, Jet Kovoley, lend credence to Beans Proctor's double theory. Would the real Ken McEntee become involved with ruthless espionage artists?

* In Ken McEntee's supposed debut column which began appearing in Active Voice this month, his picture appears alongside the column. But it is not a photograph. It is a drawing. Why the latter instead of the former? Perhaps because a closeup photo would show too clearly that Ken McEntee is not Ken McEntee? And why does the artist of the drawing, Julie Longhill, mysteriously appear in the infamous Jet Kovoley photograph? And why are Julie, Jet and their friends laughing in the picturing? Do they know something we don't? * Parnell Egan, owner of West End Tavern, refuses to supply new text for his long-time running ad in The Weekly Farce. Why the sudden negligence? Could it be that Egan has been turned off by the rudeness of Ken McEntee's double?

* When 'Paul McCartney is dead' rumors were the rage back in the 60s, the intricacies involving one of the Beatles wearing a walrus mask on their Sgt. Pepper album purportedly suggested Paul's demise. Ken McEntee's mother has a white, porcelain walrus sitting on a coffee table in her living room. Connection or coincidence? You be the judge.

Here's that order form you were looking for

SUBSCRIBE NOW - USE THIS COUPON

To subscribe, all you have to do is mark the appropriate spaces and follow the instructions.

You're damn right I want to subscribe to The Weekly Farce / Active Voice. I've enclosed a check for $10 for 12 monthly issues.

While you're at it, I know some people that would love to get The Farce and Voice as a gift. I've enclosed $10 per subscription ($9 each for orders of five or more) and the names of the people you should send them to.

I hear you guys have a catalog detailing the contents of all the back issues of The Farce and Active Voice. I've enclosed a buck. Send me a catalog.

Make checks payable to: